Most Amtrak Service in Vermont Cancelled Tomorrow

Barre, Vt. – Amtrak has cancelled most passenger rail service in Vermont tomorrow due to Winter Storm Landon, which is expected to hit our area early tomorrow morning.

- Ethan Allen Service: Both the northbound (Train #291) and southbound (Train #290) trains will not operate in Vermont tomorrow. The train will be operating between Albany and New York’s Penn Station tomorrow on its normal schedule.
- Vermonter Service: Amtrak has cancelled the northbound Vermonter (Train #56) tomorrow. The southbound Vermonter (Train #55) will operate tomorrow on its normal schedule.

“Last week’s storm and this event underscore the difficult balance between providing a reliable means of transportation and keeping our passengers safe in extreme weather events,” said Toni Clithero, AOT Grants Program Manager.
